

YOURS TO EXPLORE...

SET IN A QUIET, GENTEEL SUBURB ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CAPITAL, HENDON HALL
IS A REVELATION.

First mentioned in the Domesday Book and built as a mansion house for the benefit of Westminster Abbey, Hendon Hall passed to the Earl of Pembroke in the 16th century.

Much altered in later years, it has a strong Georgian feel, with Corinthian pillars, ornate portico and beautifully manicured terraced gardens. Behind this elegant façade lies a rich history, a sense of timelessness and a world of luxury. Step across the threshold and become part of the story...

A PLEASURE AND A PRIVILEGE...

TRANQUIL, UNDERSTATED, CLASSIC. IN EVERY RESPECT, A VISIT HERE FEELS A WORLD AWAY FROM THE HUSTLE AND BUSTLE OF THE CAPITAL.

Seized by Henry VIII during the Reformation, this splendid mansion house passed in and out of Crown ownership for hundreds of years. After being purchased by actor and theatre manager, David Garrick, in the late 18th century, it was the setting for a girls' school and an RAF convalescent home.

A heady mix of visitors has passed through here over the centuries. Step inside the lounge, kick off your shoes and relax – you'll feel right at home. Dark coloured fabrics, leather sofas and contemporary styling create a sense of distinction. Spend quiet time alone with a book. Keep abreast of the world with WiFi access. Treat yourself to afternoon tea with Champagne. Meet friends for evening cocktails and late night digestifs.
