A Brief History of Afternoon Tea

Tea consumption increased during the early 19th century (early 1840s) around the time that Anna, Duchess of Bedford is said to have complained of a "sinking" feeling during later afternoon.

At this time, it was usual to take only two meals a day: breakfast in the morning and dinner at around 8 pm.

The solution for the Duchess was to have a pot of tea and a light snack taken privately in her boudoir during the afternoon.

Later, she invited her friends and before long, this practice proved so popular that all of fashionable society were sipping tea and nibbling sandwiches in the middle of the afternoon.

The Knightley family, whose family home was Fawsley Hall for over 500 years were marvellous entertainers.

Louisa Knightley (D.1913) would take tea which was served on a raised plinth in the bay window of the Great Hall, overlooking the pasture and the Church of St. Mary.
